MISSOULA--

Douglas F. Phillip, 22, Missoula, who received his bachelor's degree in premedical sciences and chemistry with high honors in June at the University of Montana in Missoula, has been awarded an Army Health Professions Scholarship for medical studies. The scholarship, presented through the U.S. Army Medical Department, is valued at about $33,000.

Phillip, a June 1971 graduate of Missoula Sentinel High School, was accepted last December for medical training by the University of Washington School of Medicine, Seattle, under WAMI, an acronym for a cooperative medical program in the states of Washington, Alaska, Montana and Idaho. Students from those states study medicine through the Washington facility.

The Missoula man, who was commissioned as a lieutenant through the UM Army ROTC detachment in June, will be promoted to captain when he completes his medical training in Washington and is advanced to active-duty status. His medical training will be handled as an educational delay by the Army.

Phillip, son of Mr. and Mrs. Milton F. Phillip, 605 Benton Ave., Missoula, will spend the first year in medical training beginning this fall at Montana State University, Bozeman, before moving on to Seattle for the remainder of the WAMI program.

The UM premedical program is handled through the office of Donna L. Booth, coordinator of academic advising on the Missoula campus.
